A Salt Lake City police detective and Marine reservist killed in a vehicle accident Saturday, March 29, in Iraq was hailed Monday as a hero to his community and his country. Staff Sgt. James Cawley, 41, was "one of the best," Salt Lake City Police Chief Rick Dinse said. "He was a patriot, a dedicated police officer who cared about his community. Today we define the word hero with the name Jim Cawley." After serving for 12 years in the Marines, Cawley graduated from the Salt Lake Police Academy in 1997. He served as a gang unit detective and on the SWAT team. He was called back to active duty in early 2002. Cawley was hit and killed by a Humvee while en route to a firefight. In a statement released to the news media, his family said Cawley had left a letter for his son telling him that he knew his absence would be hard because he "had a similar experience" during the Vietnam War when his father served. "I remember how much I missed him," Cawley wrote to his son, "but being a child, I didn't realize how hard it must have been on him, too." "We wish the world could have known him as we did," the family statement said. "He was tough and kind, funny and smart, well read and a keen intellect. He was one of America's finest and brightest." Speaking for his family, his sister Julie Cawley Hanson said: "We support our troops and pray for their safety. We want the driver of the Humvee to know that we know that he was just doing his job. We pray for him and his safety." Cawley met and married his wife, Miyuki, when he was serving with the Marines on the Japanese island of Okinawa. The couple has two children, Cecil, 8, and Keiko, 6.

He was listed as missing until April 14, when the Defense Department announced his remains had been identified. Kemaphoom Chanawongse, known to his friends as "Ahn," came to the United States from Thailand when he was 9. He grew up in Waterford, CT, with his mother and stepfather, played youth soccer and graduated in 1999 from Waterford High School. Chanawongse was one of the first casualties of the war. He was listed as missing March 23 during fierce fighting near the Iraqi town of Nasiriyah. For weeks, his parents and friends held out hope that he would be among the missing who would come home. More than 200 people attended a candlelight vigil and prayed for his safety. Their hopes died when three Marines and a chaplain visited the flag-draped home of his mother and stepfather, Tam and Paul Patchem, to tell them their son's remains had been identified. "Everybody in the community had been praying for his safe return. But it was simply was not to be," said Rep. Rob Simmons, R-Conn., who stayed in close constant touch with the family. "I spoke to them this morning, and his stepfather said that Ahn is now at peace. They were holding out hope, but over the past week-to-ten days they were beginning to realize that the chances of finding him alive were diminished." Chanawongse had always wanted to be a Marine, his family said. His grandfather was a military man in Thailand. Before leaving for the Persian Gulf he created a Web site with photographs of himself in his Marine uniform with the caption: "the Thai import with a baby face."

CLINE, Donald J. Cline Jr.

(From <http://projects.militarytimes.com/valor/marine-lance-cpl-donald-j-cline-jr/256529>)

Marine Lance Cpl. Donald J. Cline Jr., age 21, of Washoe, NV; assigned to 1st Battalion, 2nd Marine Regiment, 2nd Marine Expeditionary Brigade, Camp Lejeune, NC; killed in action March 23, 2003 near Nasiriyah while serving during Operation Iraqi Freedom. He was listed as missing until April 13, when the Defense Department announced his remains had been identified. A year after her husband was killed in one of the first battles in Iraq, Tina Cline has an 8-inch report on the battle that took his life, but few answers. Two Marines spent three hours with her on Saturday to discuss the report that she hoped would disclose the events one year ago last Tuesday that left her the widow of Lance Cpl. Donald J. Cline Jr. But after nearly one year of investigation, the cause of his death is "indeterminable." "It's open still," Cline said. "I'm so sick of not being told the truth right away." What she was told was that her husband died a hero and will be awarded with a Bronze Star with a "V" for valor. Although the award was approved in January, she said the Marines told her the medals would be presented to her at a later date. The families of the 18 Marines killed in the An Nasiriyah battle were informed Saturday and Sunday of the investigations results, said Capt. Teresa Ovalle, spokeswoman for Camp Lejeune. "The investigation took nearly a year in order to gather and fully consider all the facts and evidence to determine how Marines were killed and wounded that day," she said. The report given to Cline included testimonies of the commanding officer and Marines who were present in the battle during the fourth day of the war. The commander said the convoy came under heavy fire. The crew chief in the amphibious vehicle traveling behind the vehicle Cline was in said, "We were on a four-lane road on the left side going south when C208 (Cline's armored vehicle) got hit. "I saw a white flash and the track flew a foot and a half off the ground. The side blew out. Everyone in the back flew out of it." Tina Cline still can't understand why she hasn't received a copy of his autopsy or the personal belongings and charred fabric found at the site. "The word closure, it bugs me, because I don't think I'll ever have closure," she said.

To his hometown parish priest, Marine Capt. Aaron Contreras, 31, was a devout Catholic who knew his Bible inside and out. "He was a very unusual young man in a spiritual way," recalled the Rev. Tom McCarthy, a priest at St. Francis Catholic Church in Sherwood, Ore., a suburb of Portland. "Aaron was very religious, and believed in his church," said his father Edward, a Vietnam veteran. Contreras played football, basketball and ran some track in high school. "He was determined in everything he did," his father said. Contreras and two others died when their UH-1 Huey helicopter crashed Sunday, March 30, at a supply and refueling point in southern Iraq, the Defense Department said. On Friday, a private memorial service will be held for the three Marines at Camp Pendleton near Oceanside, CA, where their helicopter squadron is based. Contreras was born in San Jose, CA on July 4, 1971. His family moved to the Portland, OR, suburb of Sherwood in 1979. One of five brothers, he is remembered at Sherwood High School as a student-athlete. After high school, he attended Embry-Riddle Aeronautical University in Prescott, AZ. He and his wife, Janelle, had three children — one boy and two girls. In recent years the family lived in San Diego. "The rest of us are going to miss him terribly," Contreras' mother, Rosary, told Portland television station KOIN. "We just hope this war ends soon. I mean for both sides, there are families losing sons, husbands and fathers. We want peace and I know our president is doing the best he can."

Army Cpl. Michael Edward Curtin, age 23, of South Plains, NJ; assigned to 2nd Battalion, 7th Infantry Regiment, 3rd Infantry Division, Fort Stewart, GA; killed March 29, 2003 in a suicide car-bombing near Najaf, Iraq while serving During Operation Iraqi Freedom. In four years of football for the Howell High Rebels, Mike Curtin never started a game. And he never missed a practice. "He was one those perfect type young men," his former coach, Cory Davies, said. "He was just a very courteous, cooperative person." Army Cpl. Michael Curtin of Howell, NJ, was killed Saturday, March 29, in the Najaf car bombing. Brown-haired, blue-eyed and square-jawed, Curtin, 23, had an All-American appeal, according to his sister, Katie Curtin. He was a homebody who would rather curl up with a good book than spend a night on the town. "It's just really sad," she said. "He was perfect, you know? Everything he did was what his family would have wanted him to do." Curtin's parents, Michael and Joan Curtin, issued a statement through the Army. "Our son, Michael, was a kind and courageous young man. Although he was with us but a short time, he displayed tremendous bravery, unwavering faith and a devout love for his family," they said. "He was fighting for our freedom, which we should never take for granted. He was a hero in our eyes." The loss was felt in almost every corner of Howell, a town near the New Jersey shore. Signs of condolence were posted outside diners. Flags at the town hall and other public buildings were lowered to half-staff. For Chuck Senna, who coached Curtin's Little League Yankees team, news of the young man's death evoked an era 30 years ago, when word of a combat death last touched the town. "I never thought I'd see this again in my lifetime," said Senna, a Vietnam veteran. "When this happened, I said, 'Oh, jeez, not again.' "
