Marine Cpl. Jose A. Garibay, age 21, of Costa Mesa, CA; assigned to 1st Battalion, 2nd Marine Regiment, 2nd Marine Expeditionary Brigade, Camp Lejeune, NC; killed in action March 23, 2003 near Nasiriyah, Iraq while serving during Operation Iraqi Freedom. Some of life's sweetness was on its way to Cpl. Jose Angel Garibay, had he lived to taste it. His mother, Simona, had sent off a package of his favorite Mexican candy to her son. And his favorite teacher, Janis Toman, was assembling a package of granola bars and cookies when she got word Monday that Garibay, age 21 and less than three years out of high school, had been killed in Iraq. In his mother's Costa Mesa, CA, home, candles now burn before a photograph of "Angel," as she called him, in his Marine dress uniform. He was a baby when Simona Garibay brought him to the United States from Jalisco, Mexico. Mexican and American flags dot the lawn outside her home. "Like all mothers, we love all our children, but he was my pride and joy," his mother said in Spanish. "It was a great honor having a Marine son." At Newport Harbor High School, Garibay played football but didn't achieve the glory of a starter's position. His job was to face off against the starting line in scrimmages. In other words, he took the hits to improve the team. He liked the rituals of the football team: short haircuts, jacket and tie on game day, team dinners, assistant coach Mike Bargas said. "He enjoyed being a part of the program. It was just a natural progression for him to go into the military. He knew his role. He didn't complain He didn't have a mean bone in his body." Garibay wrote his mother from overseas about the hardships of rain and sandstorms. And he asked for CDs of the Mexican ranchera folk music he loved and missed. "But (he wrote) that he was fine, and not to worry about him," his mother added. "He had a niece and asked me to watch her carefully and take good care of her. And (wrote) that God would take care of him." To his teacher, he wrote of a much-appreciated meal served as a special treat: steak, potatoes, ice cream and Pepsi. "You may not realize how much that meant to us," he wrote in a letter to Toman she received Monday. He planned to become a citizen of the country whose uniform he wore. And he hoped to wear another uniform after his military service was finished: that of a police officer. "He had a definite plan in life," Bargas said. "The military was there for him, and he was there for them too."

Joe Garza had more than 20 years in the Army, as a mechanic, a drill instructor and a respected non-commissioned officer. He had planned to stay in as long as the military would let him. "He loved the Army," his sister, Oralia Zapata told the Corpus Christi Caller-Times. Garza, 43, a native of Robstown in southern Texas, was killed April 28 in Baghdad. He fell out of a Humvee when it swerved to avoid a civilian vehicle, the Pentagon said. Garza, based at Fort Benning in Georgia, lived in Columbus with his wife of 24 years, Mary. The couple has three children. Garza was one of 10 children — six girls, four boys — and enjoyed long-distance running. "Of all 10 of us, he was the one who would try and make you laugh," said a sister, Manuela Espinoza. Garza joined the Army two or three years after graduating high school in 1978. He was a dedicated soldier who took care of his men, Mary Garza said. "He was very friendly and always had a positive attitude." A nephew, Sev Lopez, said Garza wanted to go to Iraq. "He even volunteered to go during Desert Storm, but the military felt he was more valuable here because he was a (tank) instructor," Lopez said. Lopez, who joined the National Guard for a few years, said he met several people who had Garza as a drill instructor. They told Lopez his uncle had been tough but fair. "But I just couldn't picture him that way as a mean drill instructor in someone's face."

For most military families, the grieving begins with a knock on the door. For the Gonzalez family of Rialto, CA the news of their son's death came as a jolt from the television screen. Cpl. Jorge Gonzalez was among nine Marines killed March 23 when Iraqis, feigning surrender hit the armored personnel carrier he was riding near An Nasiriyah. Later that day, his parents, Mario and Rosa Gonzalez, were watching clips from the Arab network Al-Jazeera on the Spanish-language station, Telemundo, when they saw the corpse of a U.S. serviceman. "When I saw the face, it was that of my son," Rosa Gonzalez told Los Angeles television station KMEX. The next day, Marine officers came to confirm the bad news. Gonzalez, 20, one of five children, enlisted after graduating from El Monte High School. He told his mother: "Don't worry, mom. If I die a Marine, I'll die honored." His wife, Jazty, had given birth to their first child, Alonso, on March 3 at Camp Lejeune, NC, after Gonzalez shipped out to the Mideast. He hoped to finish his hitch in the Marines next year and become a policeman. His last letter home, received March 25, included a message for the son he never saw: "If you can wait just a little, I'll see you in the summer if God wants it."

Marine Lance Cpl. Jose Gutierrez, age 22, of Los Angeles; assigned to the 2nd Battalion, 1st Marine Regiment, 1st Marine Division, Camp Pendleton, CA; killed March 21, 2003 in action in Southern Iraq while serving during Operation Iraqi Freedom. One of the first U.S. servicemen killed in combat in Iraq was not a citizen of the country for which he sacrificed his life. Lance Cpl. Jose Gutierrez, 22, a rifleman with the Marines, died in a firefight March 21 near Umm Qasr. Born in Guatemala, Gutierrez held permanent U.S. resident status, which he obtained in 1999. At 14, with his parents dead, Gutierrez followed the path of 700,000 of his countrymen to California. He made the 2,000-mile journey from his Guatemala City neighborhood without entry papers. He hopped 14 freight trains to get through Mexico. U.S. immigration authorities detained him. Fernando Castillo, Guatemala's consul general in Los Angeles, says the United States doesn't deport Guatemalan minors who arrive without family. Gutierrez was made a ward of Los Angeles Juvenile Court. He was placed in a series of group homes and foster families. He learned English and finished high school. When he reached 18, he got residency documents, Castillo said. Marcelo Mosquera, a machinist from Ecuador, and his wife, Nora, were the last couple that sheltered the lanky teenager. They cared for two younger foster children, as well, at their home in suburban Lomita, said Hector Tobar, a family friend. Neighbors told the Los Angeles Times that Gutierrez acted as the big brother, taking the younger kids to the nearby McDonald's. Tobar said Gutierrez talked of becoming an architect but put college plans on hold to join the Marine Corps a year ago. Jackie Baker, the Mosqueras' adult daughter, told Spanish-language KVEA-TV here that Gutierrez "wanted to give the United States what the United States gave to him. He came with nothing. This country gave him everything." The U.S. Embassy notified Gutierrez's older sister, his only surviving relative, of his death. He will be buried in Guatemala at her request, Castillo said.
