Army Spc. Gregory P. Sanders, age 19, of Hobart, IN; assigned to 3rd Battalion, 69th Armor, Fort Stewart, GA; killed in action March 24, 2003 while serving during Operation Iraqi Freedom. Greg Sanders, the son of a Navy sailor, was wearing combat gear even before he was out of diapers. "He wanted to be a soldier," said his mother, Leslie Sanders, holding a photo of her son, age 2, wearing a green-and-khaki camouflage T-shirt. "He was born to be a soldier." Sanders, 19, of Hobart, IN, was killed in a sniper shooting Monday in Iraq as his unit moved north toward Baghdad. His wife, Ruthann, was his high school sweetheart, and they have a 14-month-old daughter, Gwendolyn. "We're just trying to take it one day at a time," Ruthann Sanders said. "We're very proud of him." Leslie Sanders said her son enlisted right after graduating from Hobart High in 2001. He struggled over whether to join the Marines but chose the Army. He knew life in the military could be dangerous. As a child, he saw a Navy plane crash at his father's base in California. His father, a Navy veteran who is now deceased, talked with him before he joined the Army. "His dad told him it's not going to be all these wonderful things," Leslie Sanders said. "But Greg just said, 'I want to be a soldier.'" The family received a letter from Sanders on Monday, hours before they learned he had been killed, said an uncle, Rick Knight. It was written two weeks earlier in Kuwait. "His morale was great, and he said he anticipated coming home in June or July," his uncle said.

Christopher Seifert was an athlete, a musician and an outstanding student. But it was his smile that people remember best. "He had an absolutely winning smile," recalled Robert Stinson, a history professor at Moravian College in Bethlehem, PA, who was Seifert's academic adviser and instructor for two courses. "You saw him coming and saw his smile, and he lit up the morning." Seifert, 27, was a captain in the Army's 101st Airborne Division based at Fort Campbell, KY. He was killed in Kuwait Saturday when authorities say another U.S. soldier shot him in the back and tossed hand grenades into the command tents of the division's 1st Brigade. Seifert was married to Theresa Flowers-Seifert, who also had been a student at Moravian. The couple had their first child, Benjamin, four months ago. Seifert grew up in Williams Township, PA, a rural community near Easton, and was the only child of Thomas and Helen Seifert. A 1993 graduate of Wilson Area High School, Seifert ran cross-country and track. He played saxophone in the jazz, concert and marching bands. He was selected for the National Honor Society and participated in peer mediation and the ecology club. "One of the best students in that class," Principal John Martuscelli said. Family members declined to be interviewed but released a statement: "The family is obviously devastated by the loss and appreciates all the support of family and friends." While Seifert was a history major at Moravian, he enrolled in the Army Reserve Officers Training Corps at nearby Lehigh University. His interest was military history, and for a time he considered a teaching career. "But he was very happy with his decision to join the ROTC unit," Stinson said. The discipline Seifert learned in his ROTC classes carried over to the rest of his college life. "It was 'yes sir, no sir, I think I agree with that sir,'" Stinson said. "He was very respectful. When he left, he would always shake hands and say, 'Thank you, sir.'" Stinson called Seifert's death at the hands of another soldier "incredibly poignant." On Monday, he told his students about Seifert and pointed to where he used to sit in their classroom. "It's not exactly like losing a son, but it's very close to that," he said.

Sloan, 19, of Bedford Heights, OH, traded his Bearcats football jersey for an Army mechanic's coveralls. He left high school his senior year to join the Army. "He didn't drop out. He withdrew," said his father, the Rev. Tandy Sloan. "His thinking to join the Army was altruistic in the sense that he was bettering his own self while serving his country. He was very much committed to the cause of country." Sloan was a big guy, happy-go-lucky and loyal to a fault. Tony Tucker, a former classmate and senior at Bedford High, described him as "a kind, sweet person" and "a cool person to be around, but kind of quiet." Sloan, who grew up in suburban Cleveland, moved in with his mother in Fraser, MI, outside Detroit, after leaving school. His mother, Kimberly Sloan, said, "I'm extremely proud of him for fighting for our country."

"Once he got in the Marines, he was in it all the way. He didn't do anything halfway. "He enjoyed being in the Marines. He believed in what he was doing over there, and we supported him 100 percent," said his stepfather, Stanley Cooper. "He believed the war was necessary, and that's the same way we felt," Cooper said. "We're very, very proud of him." A Navy veteran, Cooper suggested his stepson join the military. Slocum hadn't been a good student before signing up, but his grades improved and he made the honor roll before graduating from Skyview High School in 1998, Cooper said. KMGH-TV, an ABC station in Denver, reported that Slocum grew up in a close-knit neighborhood, in a house next to his grandparents. "When his grandfather called me and said, 'You won't believe this,' I said, 'Oh, no,' and I just fell apart," neighbor Glenna Anderson told the station. "He's going to be awfully missed."

When Richard Stone had a heart attack in 1999, Greg came home to look after him. "We were just kind of getting to know each other." "I had a lot of concern," when Stone was sent to the Middle East, said his father, who had served in the Marines.

SULLIVAN, Narson B. Sullivan

(From <http://projects.militarytimes.com/valor/army-spc-narson-b-sullivan/256638>)

Army Spc. Narson B. Sullivan, age 21, of North Brunswick, NJ; assigned to the 411th Military Police Company based in Fort Hood, TX; killed April 25, 2003 by a non-combat weapon discharge in Iraq while serving during Operation Iraqi Freedom. The incident is under investigation. Teachers recall Narson Sullivan rollerblading through the hallways and courtyards of his high school — a tall, athletic and handsome kid whose enthusiasm for life was infectious. "You'd go out there to admonish him about violating the school rules by rollerblading in the courtyard, and the next thing you knew, you had the darn things on your own feet and he was teaching you how to skate," said Rob Allen, a teacher at Middlesex County Vocational and Technical High School in North Brunswick, NJ. Sullivan, 21, graduated in 2000 and joined the Army with his longtime friend, Matthew Richter. They had expected to serve on the buddy system but got separated. Sullivan, based at Fort Hood in Texas, was killed April 25 in Iraq when he was cleaning his weapon and it discharged, according to the Defense Department. "He was really a great kid. A nice person. Focused and polite," recalled his high school principal, Diane Veilleux. "He always had a beautiful smile." Nancy Richter, his best friend's mother, who works at the school, said, "I remember him and Matt, eating, watching TV, making plans. He used to call me 'Mom,' which was part of his sense of humor — because we're white and he was black. He liked to see people's eyebrows go up." His aunt, Tabatha Sullivan, said, "The thing that's so upsetting is that we thought this was all over and that he was out of danger. We want everyone to know that we're praying for all the other soldiers who are there. We wish they all could come home safe."
