PAGE, Patti Page

(Abstracted from the (Durham, NC) Herald-Sun, January 4, 2013)

NASHVILLE — Unforgettable songs like "Tennessee Waltz" and "(How Much Is That) Doggie in the Window?" made Patti Page the best-selling female singer of the 1950s and a star who would spend much of the rest of her life traveling the world. When unspecified health problems finally stopped her decades of touring, though, Page wrote a sad-but-resolute letter to her fans late last year about the change. "Although I feel I still have the voice God gave me, physical impairments are preventing me from using that voice as I had for so many years," Page wrote. "It is only He who knows what the future holds." Page died on New Year's Day in Encinitas, Calif., according to publicist Schatzi Hageman, ending one of pop music's most diverse careers. She was 85 and just five weeks away from being honored at the Grammy Awards with a Lifetime Achievement Award from The Recording Academy. Page achieved several career milestones in American pop culture, but she'll be remembered for indelible hits that crossed the artificial categorizations of music and remained atop the charts for months to reach a truly national audience. "Tennessee Waltz" scored the rare achievement of reaching No. 1 on the pop, country and R&B charts simultaneously and was officially adopted as one of two official songs by the state of Tennessee. Its reach was so powerful, six other artists reached the charts the following year with covers. Two other hits, "I Went To Your Wedding" and "Doggie in the Window," which had a second life for decades as a children's song, each spent more than two months at No. 1. Other hits included "Mockin' Bird Hill," "Hush, Hush, Sweet Charlotte," and "Allegheny Moon." She teamed with George Jones on "You Never Looked That Good When You Were Mine." "I just loved singing with Patti and she hit notes I never dreamed of," Jones said Wednesday in an email to The Associated Press. "We cut some songs together and it was a great time. She'll be missed by lots of folks and everybody needs to know how great she was. Patti was a wonderful singer with a real special voice." So special, Page managed to maintain her career when most singers of her generation and their more innocent songs were shoved aside by the swinging hips of Elvis Presley. Page proved herself something of a match for the nascent rock 'n' roll crowd and its obsession with sex, continuing to place songs on the pop charts into the 1960s and the country charts into the '80s. Page never kept track, but was told late in life that she'd recorded more than 1,000 songs. That's not what she had in her mind growing up as young Clara Ann Fowler. "I was a kid from Oklahoma who never wanted to be a singer, but was told I could sing," she said in a 1999 interview. "And things snowballed." She was popular in pop music and country and became the first singer to have television programs on all three major networks, including "The Patti Page Show" on ABC. In films, Page co-starred with Burt Lancaster in his Oscar-winning characterization of "Elmer Gantry," and she appeared in "Dondi" with David Janssen and in "Boy's Night Out" with James Garner and Kim Novak. She also starred on stage in the musical comedy "Annie Get Your Gun." Her death came just a few days after the conclusion of the run of "Flipside: The Patti Page Story," an off-Broadway musical commemorating her life. In 1999, after 51 years of performing, Page won her first Grammy for traditional pop vocal performance for "Live at Carnegie Hall — The 50th Anniversary Concert." Page was planning to attend a special ceremony on Feb. 9 in Los Angeles where she was to receive a lifetime achievement award from The Recording Academy. Neil Portnow, the Academy's president and CEO, said he spoke with Page and she had been "grateful and excited" to receive the honor. "Our industry has lost a remarkable talent and a true gift, and our sincere condolences go out to her family, friends and fans who were inspired by her work." Page was born Nov. 8, 1927, in Claremore, Okla. The family of three boys and eight girls moved a few years later to nearby Tulsa. She got her stage name working at radio station KTUL, which had a 15-minute program sponsored by Page Milk Co. The regular Patti Page singer left and was replaced by Fowler, who took the name with her on the road to stardom. Page was discovered by Jack Rael, a band leader who was making a stop in Tulsa in 1946 when he heard Page sing on the radio. Rael called KTUL asking where the broadcast originated. When told Page was a local singer, he quickly arranged an interview and abandoned his career to be Page's manager. A year later she signed a contract with Mercury Records and began appearing in nightclubs in the Chicago area. Her first major hit was "With My Eyes Wide Open I'm Dreaming," but she got noticed a few years earlier in 1947 with "Confess." She created a distinctive sound for the music industry on that song by overdubbing her own voice when she didn't have enough money to hire backup singers for the single. "We would have to pay for all those expenses because Mercury felt that I had not as yet received any national recognition that would merit Mercury paying for it," Page once said. "Confess" was enough of a hit that Rael persuaded Mercury to let Page try full four-part harmony by overdubbing. The result was "With My Eyes Wide Open I'm Dreaming." The label read, "Vocals by Patti Page, Patti Page, Patti Page and Patti Page." "Tennessee Waltz," her biggest-selling record, was a fluke. Because Christmas was approaching, Mercury Records wanted Page to record "Boogie Woogie Santa Claus" in 1950. Page and Rael got hold of "Tennessee Waltz," convinced that a pop artist could make a smash hit out of it. Mercury agreed to put it on the B-side of the Christmas song. "Mercury wanted to concentrate on a Christmas song and they didn't want anything with much merit on the flip side," Page said. "They didn't want any disc jockeys to turn the Christmas record over. The title of that great Christmas song was 'Boogie Woogie Santa Claus,' and no one ever heard of it." "Tennessee Waltz" became the first pop tune that crossed over into a big country hit. The waltz was on the charts for 30 weeks, 12 of them in the top 10, and eventually sold more than 10 million copies, behind only "White Christmas" by Bing Crosby at the time. She received the Pioneer Award from the Academy of Country Music in 1980. She also is a member of the Oklahoma Jazz Hall of Fame. In her later career, Page and husband Jerry Filiciotto spent half the year living in Southern California and half in an 1830s farmhouse in New Hampshire. He died in 2009. Page is survived by her son, Daniel O'Curran, daughter Kathleen Ginn and sister Peggy Layton.

Following retirement, Gloria and Bob moved to Englewood, FL to escape the Ohio winters he detested. In April, 2013 he married Jean Pasley of Ft. Lauderdale who survives him. Bob graduated from the Wharton School of Business at the University of Pennsylvania with a B.S. in Economics in 1948. He was employed by the Owens-Illinois company in Toledo, OH from 1948-1979, retiring as an assistant comptroller. Bob's life was one of quiet and humble service to God, family, and country. As a father, Bob did his best to honor and foster the diverse interests of his children. While supporting many of their initiatives, he didn't hesitate to speak bluntly if he thought their choices would put them in untenable positions. Retirement and the move to the Englewood area returned him to an important part of his roots as he spent winters here as a KMI student in Venice. He contributed his memories in a recent PBS Special that featured the institution and was able to attend its premiere showing in Venice earlier this year. Retirement also provided additional opportunities to express his faith as a volunteer in several organizations. He and wife Gloria delivered Meals on Wheels for many years and he served as treasurer for the organization. He was also a member of the Coast Guard Auxiliary, working patrols and assisting stranded boaters. His meticulous nature served him well when planning extended outings to various ports for other members of the flotilla. Bob was active throughout his life and insisted on continuing his daily activities far past the point when most individuals would have retired to the couch. When he was no longer able to use the walk behind mower, he moved to a zero turn, which also served as transportation to the mailbox. Weeding was done on hands and knees and the "weed bucket" was his constant companion while doing yard work. It is likely that much of his military service would have never been told had it not been for the efforts of Warren Watson, the son of another member of the 117th Infantry. Watson's quest for detailed information led to the retelling of Bob's service, most often in reconnaissance with his platoon. He spent much time in front of the front lines, scouting enemy positions and was known as "Fearless Fosdick" by his commander and men. Cast in a leadership role at the age of eighteen, he won the respect of seasoned veterans twice his age by following the precepts of command: the men eat first and the officer doesn't retire until he is certain all the men have been taken care of. Not one to boast or embellish, he was careful to report only what he was certain was fact and didn't hesitate to correct "history" where it had been rewritten and didn't match his experience as part of the action. His account of his experiences was prefaced by the comment: "I didn't think much about being killed. Maybe the "patriotic" instinct took over, and it was a case of whatever happened-happened." He credited the Lord's hand with saving his life on several instances. He was careful to consider risk before taking any action. Years later, when asked if he ever thought Peters' actions had put him at risk, platoon sergeant George Yandell, a soldier under his command, responded that the men knew that wherever they went, Bob had likely been there first. His platoon was, to the best of Bob's knowledge, the most highly decorated, earning 13 Silver Stars, 21 Bronze Stars, and 10 Purple Hearts, with only one killed in action. Bob himself was awarded the Silver Star and Oak Leaf Cluster for his bravery in action. Bob loved music, both classical and jazz, and was the organist and choir director in Lutheran congregations in Ohio and Florida. From their earliest days, the children fell asleep on Saturday evenings to the sound of him practicing hymns and Bach preludes, postludes, and offertories. He was on the Board of Governors for the Lutheran Students' Center at Bowling Green (Ohio) State University, coordinating the finances of the Gamma Delta house which rented rooms to students under the supervision of the vicar who also conducted the services at Prout Chapel on the university campus. Vicars, a new one each year, would travel monthly from Bowling Green to the Peters' home in Maumee, Ohio to review the finances. The original two-story Gamma Delta house was ill-suited as a meeting place for gatherings of Lutheran students and Bob led the effort to build a suitable worship and fellowship center off campus. The facility was located immediately across the street from a major campus dormitory and included a chapel with a pipe organ he'd located as well as a roomy meeting area, complete with kitchen, where students could gather for Bible study and the infamous "Cost Suppers" which featured copious amounts of spaghetti with meat sauce. The new facility provided space for a full-time pastor to serve the student body and gave students an opportunity to experience leadership and service in their own congregation rather than merely being guests in a community church. Bob's interest in finance led to his writing the book: "ROI: Practical Theory and Innovative Applications", published in 1974. The second edition, published in 1979, was translated into a number of foreign languages including Chinese, Japanese, Portuguese, and Danish. While figures were a serious interest, Bob's dry sense of humor was captured in the sign above his desk: "Torture numbers and they'll confess to anything." His financial abilities also benefited the three churches where he was an adult member. While Saturday evenings were dedicated to practicing church music, Sunday afternoons were reserved for posting the congregational offerings to the church books. He worked with the Church of the Lutheran Confession to establish the current North Port congregation. His dedicated efforts helped move the congregation from a store front setting to its own facility. He coordinated the purchase of a parsonage to provide living quarters for a resident pastor and then arranged for its subsequent sale when the home was no longer needed. He relinquished his duties as organist and financial secretary on December 19, 2013 due to declining health. Bob is survived by his wife, Jean, five children, nine grandchildren, and two great grandchildren. The family especially recognizes the contributions of those who assisted Bob: his housekeeper of many years, Vicki Palumbo, grandson Matt Keene (chief mangrove pruner), daughter Lori (moral support, overseer of meals, medical appointments, installation of medical devices, and bee control), and John Myers (chief driver and tender of wounds) his attorney, Chip Gaylor, and Pastor Mark Weis. They express their thanks to Dr. Harold Kaplan for his many years attending to Bob's health as well as the staff of Tidewell Hospice for their care during his final days. Bob's life was immeasurably enriched by his wife, Jean, and her devotion to him during his final days. Burial will be in Section 8, Site 756 in the Sarasota National Cemetery, 9810 State Road 72, Sarasota. A memorial service will be held at a later date. Farley Funeral Home of Venice is handling arrangements. Memorial gifts may be directed to the Student Aid Fund of Immanuel Lutheran College, Eau Claire, WI.

(Abstracted from <https://www.legacy.com/obituaries/heraldtribune/obituary.aspx?n=james-fredrick-pippenger&pid=167299857&fhid=18692>)

"Anything worth doing," James Frederick "Jim" Pippenger liked to say, "is worth doing right." He lived these words - as a husband, father, businessman, and community leader - for 82 years. He died in Sarasota on September 28, 2013, family at his side, after a brief illness. Jim was born in Dayton, Ohio on March 15, 1931, the first child of James F. and Helen Mullen Pippenger. While attending Fairview High School he began dating Louise Ann Requarth; they were graduated in 1949 and married in 1952. After serving in the US Army in Tokyo during the Korean Conflict, Jim returned to Dayton. He earned a business degree at Sinclair Community College and joined the fourth generation management and ownership at the Requarth Lumber Co., where he worked from 1957 until he retired in 1990. Jim's commitment to doing things right made him a respected community volunteer. He held leadership positions with the Shiloh Park Cemetery, National Association of Credit Management, Ohio Lumbermen's Association, Good Samaritan Hospital, Rotary Club of Dayton, and many others. Harrison Township voters elected him three times to serve as trustee and, in 1970, he was appointed to a seat in the Ohio House of Representatives. Jim loved the game of golf and valued the many friendships he and Louise formed while playing at Miami Valley Golf Club, where he was president in 1982-83. After retiring to Sarasota, Jim was active in the Misty Creek community and hosted international Rotary District Governors in his home. He rang a bell for the Salvation Army at Christmas and drove a golf cart carrying patients to and from the parking lot of Memorial's HealthFit. He represented fellow residents on the Glenridge Advisory Council and was a member of Gulf Gate Rotary Club, serving as its president in 2011-12. An avid nature photographer, he produced notecards from his colorful pictures of Florida wildlife and distributed them freely to friends and acquaintances. Jim's dedication to his community was exceeded only by his devotion to his family. He is survived by his wife of 61 years, Louise, his son Alan (Marsha), daughter Karen Summers, and five grandchildren: Laura and Nathan Pippenger, Emily Shortes (Sean), and Aaron and Philip Summers. Jim is also survived by his brother Ralph (Miriam Hoefflin). A celebration of life will be held at the Glenridge on Palmer Ranch. POWELL, Juanita Tomlinson Powell

(Abstracted from the Atlanta (GA) Journal-Constitution, September 8, 2009)
Juanita Tomlinson Powell, 94, of Valdosta - a good woman who led a good life - died at Langdale Hospice House Saturday, September 5, 2009. She was married for 54 years to the late Franklin Benjamin Powell Jr. and for 65 years lived in the same house on East Park Avenue where they reared four daughters. They were committed to ensuring that their daughters were well-educated, well-mannered, responsible, caring and independent. Mrs. Powell was born Aug. 15, 1915, in Alamo to Joseph Patrick and Abbie Hill Tomlinson. She was the oldest living descendant of Enoch and Jemima Giddens Tomlinson of Clinch County. Reared in Adel, Mrs. Powell moved to Valdosta as a teenager and worked for Judge Harley Langdale before joining Roberts Insurance Agency, which became Blanton & Cross Insurance Agency. She was secretary-treasurer of Blanton and Cross and was unquestionably acknowledged as the person who knew more about insurance than anyone else in Valdosta. She retired in her early 70s and became a member of the South Georgia Medical Center Auxiliary where she volunteered well into her 80s. She had the time in retirement to enjoy membership in the Literary Guild and Lowndes County Historical Society. Mrs. Powell was a founding member of Park Avenue United Methodist Church where she held several leadership positions. She was a longtime member of the Elks Aidmore Auxiliary of Valdosta Elks Lodge #728 where Mr. Powell was a Past Exalted Ruler and she was a Bingo night regular. She was constant in attending Valdosta High School Wildcat football games, never passed up a good game of poker and taught many a child how to win at the game. She was godmother to Johnathan Sellars of Brunswick and Lauren Sellars Prince of St. Simons Island. Though she traveled throughout Europe and North America, Mrs. Powell took the greatest delight in sharing her home in Valdosta and house at Cherry Lake with family and friends, her children and their friends, her grandchildren and great-grandchildren, friends' children and their grandchildren and sometimes even strangers. In fact, after she was widowed, there were 13 toothbrushes in her bathroom, all kept there by people who regularly enjoyed her company. She evolved into a great cook who turned out a dinner every Sunday then-determined by how much she had cooked - invited whomever she ran in to to join the family table after church where lively, sometimes six-way conversations ensued. Though a frugal woman, Mrs. Powell was generous with her hospitality and private acts of charity, compassion and friendship. She held to traditional values but was progressive socially and politically. She accepted with grace whatever circumstances befell her and adapted to life changes. Her oldest daughter, Juanita Ann Powell, 49, died of breast cancer in 1991, and Mr. Powell died in 1993. Survivors include three daughters, Kay Powell of Smyrna, Martha Coppage of Valdosta and Mary Frank Wingate of Quitman and Mrs. Powell's beloved son-in-law, Joe Wingate; a sister, Carolyn Harris of Adel; two grandsons and their wives, Joseph Lyle Coppage and Kelli Coppage of Telluride, CO, and Benjamin Powell Wingate and Holly Wingate of Quitman; and three great-grandchildren, Holden Coppage of Telluride and Mary Anne Wingate and Monroe Wingate of Quitman. The funeral will be held at 2 p.m. Wednesday, September 9, 2009 at the Carson McLane Funeral Home. Visitation will be from 6-8 p.m. Tuesday at the funeral home. Burial will follow at Sunset Hill Cemetery. Memorial contributions may be made to Langdale Hospice House, 2251 Pineview Dr., Valdosta, GA 31602. Condolences may be conveyed online at www.mclanefuneralservices.com.

(Abstracted from http://rand-wilson.com/obituaries/obit\_view.php?id=349)

Laura G. Prescott, died Sunday, August 26, 2016 at the age of 60 after a three-year battle with cancer. Laura was born on July 19, 1958 in Charleston, WV, the fifth of Baxter and Eloise Prescott's six children. After her graduation from George Washington High School in 1976, she attended Dartmouth College where she graduated with a B.A. in History in 1980. In 1983, Laura married Paul E. Duffy, with whom she had two children, Katharine and Nathan. They lived in Brookline, NH for 19 years before divorcing in 2002. Laura's latent interest in genealogy ballooned into a full-blown passion in 1997 which led to a notable and accomplished career for the rest of her life. Laura was an employee at the New England Historical Genealogical Society for seven years before launching her own business, Laura G. Prescott Research Services, LLC. Widely respected in her field, Laura gave presentations on family history and research across the United States, Canada and England and served as the Vice President of the Genealogical Speakers Guild. She also served as President of the Association of Professional Genealogists (APG) from 2010 to 2011 and was awarded the organization's prestigious Grahame T. Smallwood Jr. Award of Merit in 2014. In September 2017, the APG established the Laura G. Prescott Award for Exemplary Service to Genealogy in her honor. In March of 2014, Laura was hired by Ancestry and moved to Utah to become their new Director of Ancestry Academy, a service which created full-length online video courses for genealogists of all levels. Despite all of her many accomplishments and accolades, Laura was most proud of her legacy of teaching and helping others in the genealogy community. In July of 2015, Laura was diagnosed with cancer and bravely (and stubbornly) outlived her life expectancy by two and a half years. She died peacefully at home in Lebanon, NH, surrounded by family, on August 26. She is survived by her mother, Eloise C. Prescott of Lebanon, NH, her siblings, Susan C. Prescott and husband Michael Seraphinoff of Whidbey Island, WA, Deborah P. and husband William Krumme of Dallas, TX, Thomas M. and wife Barbara C. Duffy of Portsmouth, NH, and her granddaughter Margaret C. Tarvainen. She is predeceased by her father Baxter C. Prescott and sister Patricia P. Norton in 2010. Laura will be buried with her ancestors at Mount Auburn Cemetery in Cambridge, MA. Details on memorial services in both New England and Salt Lake City, UT are forthcoming. Gifts can be made to the Salt Lake Institute of Genealogy (SLIG) Scholarship founded in Laura's name: <https://ugagenealogy.blogspot.com/2018/07/new-laura-g-prescott-slig-scholarship.html>. PROENNEKE, Richard Proenneke

(Abstracted by courtesy of the Fairbanks Daily News-Miner (AK), April 29, 2003)

ANCHORAGE--Dick Proenneke, who lived alone in a remote cabin and kept journals published as the classic Alaska memoir "One Man's Wilderness," has died at age 86. Proenneke died Easter Sunday in California. Until 1998, Proenneke lived alone in a cabin he built at Twin Lakes in what is now Lake Clark National Park and Preserve. "I call him a modern-day Henry David Thoreau," said John Branson, a Lake Clark park ranger and historian who was a longtime friend of Proenneke's. "Thoreau lived at Walden for only one year. Dick lived there for 30 years." Proenneke moved permanently to Twin Lakes in 1968 at age 52 after retiring as a diesel mechanic and heavy-equipment operator in Kodiak. Branson said Proenneke wanted to live deep in the wilderness out of a need for simplicity rather than to escape his fellows. "He was not to be misconstrued as an end-of-the-roader or anti-social at all," Branson told the Anchorage Daily News. "He was extremely hospitable and gracious to visitors." "One Man's Wilderness: An Alaskan Odyssey" was first published in 1973, attracting visitors to Twin Lakes, 20 miles north of Lake Clark in the Alaska Range. "A lot of people all over the country know him, and a good bit of the world," said younger brother Raymond Proenneke in Hemet, Calif., where Dick lived for the past five years. "He'd have visitors from Denmark, Germany, Sweden and different countries like that. Some of them would return every year." Dick Proenneke was a daily journal keeper, filling scores of stenographic notebooks and calendars with wildlife observations, weather notations, the details of erecting his cabin and cache and reflections on the simplest of lifestyles. "What a man never has, he never misses," Proenneke writes in "One Man's Wilderness," the record of his first year at Twin Lakes, when he was living in a friend's cabin and building his own. "I learned something from the big game animals. Their food is pretty much the same from day to day. I don't vary my fare too much either, and I've never felt better in my life. I don't confuse my digestive system, I just season simple food with hunger." The book was reissued in a new format in 1999 and won a National Outdoor Book Award. It may have sold as many as 75,000 copies over the years, a best seller by Alaska standards, said Sara Juday, regional manager for Alaska Northwest Books, the publisher. "It has a kind of cult status. It has changed people's lives," Juday said. Richard Proenneke was born and raised in Iowa, one of seven children. He served in the Navy during World War II and moved to Alaska in 1950. Proenneke never married, never had children and never talked about any of it, his brother said. He left Twin Lakes at age 82 when his health began to fail and the winters got tougher for him. In the last several years, he'd had a progression of strokes, his brother said. A few years ago, Dick and his brother donated to the Park Service the mass of steno notebooks he kept as well as photographs and films he'd made at Twin Lakes. The agency intends to have a historian comb the journals to publish another book or a series of books, said Jeanne Schaaf, the park's chief of cultural resources.

The body of 24-year-old Michael Purdy was recovered Sunday along a trail in Denali National Park. The National Park Service had said Purdy had gone on a hiking trip but never returned. Purdy, from Portland, was supposed to start a summer job with Denali ATV Tours in Healy, Alaska but didn't show up for his first day. It was going to be Purdy's second year with the tour company. Early indications are that Purdy, an experience hiker, had left the trail to do some scrambling on higher terrain and fell and died of a head injury. His car was found nearby with overnight backpacking gear and food. "Friends, family and co-workers describe Mike Purdy as an adventurous and experienced backcountry hiker familiar with the park," the park service said in a statement.
