THATCHER, David Jonathan Thatcher

(Abstracted from <http://thisainhell.us/blog/?p=66494>)

The Doolittle Tokyo Raiders announced the passing of Staff Sergeant David J. Thatcher, age 94, who was the engineer-gunner for Crew 7 (Ruptured Duck). That leaves only Lieutenant Colonel Richard Cole, the co-pilot for Crew 1 as the sole survivor of that secret mission to payback Japan for the raid on Pearl Harbor. After bombing targets in Tokyo, [The pilot of #7, Lieutenant Ted] Lawson headed the plane towards China. Running low on fuel, Lawson tried to land the plane on a beach in darkness and heavy rain, but instead crashed in the surf after hitting a wave causing the plane to flip over. The crash seriously injured all the members of the crew except for Thatcher, who was briefly knocked out in the crash but suffered only a bump to his head. After regaining consciousness and making it to shore, Thatcher saved the lives of his crew by gathering them on the beach, administering first aid and making contact with some friendly Chinese guerillas who had come upon the crew. He convinced the guerillas to take the crew to safety in inland China. Over the next few days, the crew repeatedly barely escaped capture by Japanese patrols searching for the Raiders. For his bravery in saving the lives of his crew, Thatcher was awarded the Silver Star. His other decorations included the Distinguished Flying Cross, Air Medal with four Oak Leaf Clusters, and the Chinese Army, Navy and Air Corps Medal, Class A, 1st Grade. After they were rescued, Thatcher went on to fly 26 more missions over Africa and Europe until the war ended. He was discharged in 1945. Thatcher married the love of his life for 70 years, Margaret Dawn Goddard Thatcher, and worked for the Post Office until his retirement in 1980. A funeral service will be Monday, June 27 at Garden City Funeral Home in Missoula, MT. A full military ceremony with honors will follow at Sunset Memorial Gardens where Thatcher will be buried. Prior to his retirement in 1998, Joe led the curriculum committee that developed the Doctor of Pharmacy program. Many of Joe's students and colleagues have stayed in touch through the years, expressing their gratitude for his guidance and friendship. Joe was devoted to his family, his church, and music. He tutored his children in music, and math and science whenever they needed his help, and sometimes when they didn't think they needed his help. He served a term as president of the Ada PTA where his five children all attended. He was a soloist, cantor, occasional choir director, and guitarist at Our Lady of Lourdes Catholic Church for nearly 50 years, providing music for countless weekend services, weddings and funerals and mentoring other cantors. Later in life, Joe became interested in cooking and enjoyed cooking shows, new recipes and gadgets. His favorite recipes included those from his Portuguese heritage, New England seafood and anything with beef. He was a fan of Boston area sports including Redsox, Celtics, Bruins and Patriots. Joe was a loving and devoted husband to his wife, Terry of nearly 60 years, a generous and loving father to his children: Karen (Gene) Harris, Richard (Paula) Theodore, Sharon (Mark) Athearn, Carolyn Theodore (Mark Mecenias) and Lauren (Louis) Mazzoli, and a doting grandfather to his many grandchildren, whom he loved to tease mercilessly. Hanson-Neely Funeral Home in Ada is handling the arrangements. A Mass of Christian burial will be held on Tuesday, April 14 at Our Lady of Lourdes Catholic Church in Ada. He will be laid to rest in his ancestral burial plot in Notre Dame Cemetery in Fall River, Mass. In lieu of flowers, the family asks that donations be made to: Pancreatic Cancer Action Network www.pancan.org or www.purplestride.org/columbus or Our Lady of Lourdes Catholic Church.

THOMAS, Peter Thomas

(Abstracted from internet sources)

Peter Thomas, age 91, a voice-over icon and World War II veteran, died Saturday, nearly two years after he lost his wife and high school sweetheart, Stella Barrineau Thomas. His distinctive vocal cords made him a part of Americana, but locally Peter Thomas became famous for his humanitarian heart. "He was loved by so many people," said Peter Thomas Jr., the 65-year-old son who was by his father's side in Naples when he passed, along with Peter Thomas's two other children, Doug Thomas and Elizabeth Joyoprayitno. During a career that spanned seven decades, Peter Thomas lent his smooth and silky baritone to everything from commercials to documentaries, his most well-known work being the narrator of "Forensic Files." He was a radio announcer, a newspaper reporter, television anchor for CBS New York and finally, a voice-over actor. Born in Pensacola to a Presbyterian minister, Peter Thomas had a strict upbringing, but he credited it as instrumental to his future career. In a 2014 interview, Peter Thomas said his Welsh father required him to read and memorize Bible passages, and encouraged him to paint mental pictures of words while speaking. In high school, Peter Thomas started reading poetry and news on the local radio station. That's when he met Stella. After spotting her at a school dance, he began to woo Stella by dedicating a song and poem to her on his show. Stella and Peter Thomas were married on June 29, 1946, and raised three children together in Greenwich, CT. The couple purchased a home in Naples in 1966 on a whim during a vacation, but they didn't move to Southwest Florida permanently until 1985, as Peter Thomas continued to travel extensively for his career. Peter Thomas Jr. and Joyoprayitno both mentioned that one of their most cherished memories was being taken to numerous Broadway shows by their parents, who wanted their children to have an appreciation for the arts. "He was a very caring person and very caring father," Joyoprayitno said. "He would do anything at all that you asked of him. You didn't have to ask him twice. He cared so much for other people." The love of performance art was definitely a trait that was passed on, as both Peter Thomas Jr. and Doug Thomas have also worked as voice-over actors, as well as one of Peter Thomas's seven grandchildren. The couple also had two great-grandchildren. In 1943, Peter Thomas volunteered for the Army and was shipped out to Europe that December. Several months later, he was on the shores of Normandy, France replacing soldiers killed the day before in the D-Day invasion. "I was 19 when I joined the war. My parents were immigrants who did their part during the First World War. Being an immigrant child, my parents inculcated in me a love of this country," Peter Thomas said in a 2007 Naples Daily News interview. "They would say to me,

'Remember you are living in the greatest country in the world with opportunities and a chance to do anything you want.' They said that to me with an expectation that I'd give back to my country." "My parents lost so many people in the First World War. I grew up hearing all these stories about my family in that war. You know, my Uncle Bill was in the trenches of France in World War I. I had to go and do my part as well," he continued. "I think that was a general feeling all the way through America at that time. Everybody wanted to go. Not like today." While overseas, he fought through France, Belgium and crossed the Rhine into Germany while serving with the First Infantry Division. In addition to Normandy, he was in four other major campaigns, including the Battle of the Bulge and was issued a Battle Star for each of the five campaigns as well as the Bronze Star, the Purple Heart, the Unit French Croix de Guerre and Belgian Fourragère. Upon returning to the states, Peter Thomas traveled to New York and fell right back into voice work there. He connected with Walter Cronkite to produce "The Jack Paar Show." "I did that for eight years. They offered me a chance to do the 11 o'clock news. But then corporate sent these contracts over saying I couldn't do anything but CBS news programs," Peter Thomas said. "I wanted to do documentaries and commercials as well and didn't want to limit myself. It wasn't for me. Later, Walter told me I made the right decision. He said, 'They made me retire at 65.' And, I said, 'I'm still going as long as the voice holds up.'" That is exactly what Peter Thomas did, working until almost the end of his life. Along with narrating all 403 episodes of "Forensic Files" during its 17-season run, the legendary voice-over actor has a body of work too numerous to list. He also won innumerable awards, but the one he was most proud of was receiving an Oscar for "One Survivor Remembers," an HBO documentary about concentration camp survivor Gerda Weissman Klein. While Peter Thomas was most known for his serious voice on documentaries, he also had quite a funny bone. That was shown in multiple commercials, particularly in one he did for Cool Whip. "The images you are about to see may be difficult to look at," Peter Thomas says in his unique pensive tone for the commercial, as images of limp, sad-looking cakes are shown. "Sadly, every year millions of innocent cakes are mangled, mistreated and hurt, but there is something you can do. Go to the freezer section and pick up new Cool Whip frosting." While the mention of his name didn't always evoke recognition, Peter Thomas's voice was one millions of people worldwide immediately recognized. That wasn't surprising, seeing as how it could be heard pretty much everywhere one looked. As he was being recognized at the 2014 Marine Corps League of Naples Honor the Free Press event, a speaker reminded the audience that Peter Thomas was the one responsible for the famous "Don't leave home without it" line in the American Express commercials. He's also the man who was asked to record instructions for Philips's HeartStart automated external defibrillator (AED) devices, because as Peter Thomas put it, "they wanted a voice that wouldn't scare people." Thanks to his calm, reassuring tone, the devices have helped save many lives. "I had somebody on a plane tell me, 'You saved my life,'" Thomas said in an 2014 interview. "There happened to be an AED machine and they followed the instructions. He said if the machine hadn't been there, he wouldn't have been there. It's a wonderful feeling to know that you're doing something that is contributing to mankind." "(His voice) still amazes me," said Peter Thomas Jr. "Dad has piles of fan mail from all over the world. He was known internationally because of 'Forensic Files'." The executive producer of that show, Paul Dowling, understands that better than most. "It got to the point quickly where Peter not only became a part of the show, it was where we gave him no direction," Dowling said, because Peter Thomas was known for always being extremely prepared and knowledgeable about the subject matter. While Dowling said he has been encouraged many times to bring "Forensic Files" back, the producer doesn't think it will be possible. The show's reruns are broadcast in the U.S. on the HLN network and syndicated internationally. "He can't be replaced," Dowling said. "He was that great at it. I don't want to water it down or change it." Peter Thomas was known for his love of veterans. He contributed his time, voice and more to the cause close to his heart, working on various committees and organizations whose goals were to honor and recognize those who fought for this nation's freedom, like himself. "When I see American soldiers, I think, 'That's the greatest thing we have in this country — the American soldiers in Iraq and Afghanistan. These are the same kind of guys, with the same kind of courage that we had in the Second World War,'" Peter Thomas said in 2007. "They need to know, they are beloved." Many years after returning from WWII, Peter Thomas wrote a poem about that and titled "Omaha Beach." He would later go on to recite it during a 2013 Memorial Day ceremony at the National World War II Memorial in Washington, DC. Amy Snyder, the executive director of the Holocaust Museum of Southwest Florida, said Peter Thomas "was a giant of a man — a true gentleman and a humble servant." "Because of his role in WWII as a liberator of the Nordhausen concentration camp, Peter wanted to make certain the story continued to be told," she said. "He supported the Holocaust Museum in many ways — from narrating the museum's original audio tour and documentary, to sharing his WWII experience with high school students. Peter was always gracious with his time and the students learned so much from him. He will be greatly missed, but has left a lasting legacy for future generations." Stella and Peter Thomas were a love story come to life. She meant more to him than many people realize, family and friends said. "They were a team. They supported each other in everything they did," Joyoprayitno said on Monday from the couple's 10th Avenue South home in Naples. "But (Peter) gave Stella the credit for everything he did." Therefore, losing her was a major blow to Peter Thomas's life, and particularly his health, his children said. She passed away on June 16, 2014. "This past year and a half were very difficult without Stella," Joyoprayitno said, adding that a recent infection after visiting a dermatologist was causing her father a lot of pain. With his children flying in to be by his side, Peter Thomas seemed to finally be at peace. "We were encouraging him to let go," his daughter said. "It seemed to happen in the most beautiful way. We witnessed him making the conscious decision to let go of this life. We're very happy that he is no longer suffering. "It's the end of an era. The Peter and Stella era. It's bittersweet," she said. The family is finalizing funeral arrangements with the pastor of Naples Community Church where the couple attended, but plan to open the service to the public.

THORSNESS, Leo Thorsness

(Abstracted from <http://www.craigfuneralhome.com/obituaries/Leo-Thorsness/#!/Obituary>)

Medal of Honor recipient Col. Leo K. Thorsness died Tuesday in St. Augustine, FL, according to a news release from the Congressional Medal of Honor Society. He was 85. The U.S. Air Force veteran was shot down over North Vietnam and subsequently held captive by the North Vietnamese at the Hoa Lo Prison, nicknamed the "Hanoi Hilton." He was released on March 4, 1973, almost six years after he was shot down. He was awarded the Medal of Honor by President Richard Nixon on Oct. 15, 1973. He retired from the Air Force in 1973. Thorsness was born Feb. 14, 1932 in Walnut Grove, MN, where he earned the Eagle Scout award from the Boy Scouts of America. He is one of only nine known Eagle Scouts who also received the Medal of Honor. In 2010, Thorsness received the Distinguished Eagle Scout Award. He attended South Dakota State College in 1950 and enlisted in the Air Force a year later. He graduated from the Aviation Cadet Program with a commission earning his wings. He served as a fighter pilot with Strategic Air Command and Tactical Air Command before he was sent to Vietnam with the 357th Tactical Fighter Squadron. He and his wingman were shot down in April 1967. He is survived by his wife Gaylee. Funeral services have not been announced.

The President of the United States in the name of the Congress takes pride in presenting the Medal of Honor to:

LIEUTENANT COLONEL LEO K. THORSNESS, UNITED STATES AIR FORCE

For service as set forth in the following citation:

For conspicuous gallantry and intrepidity in action at the risk of his life above and beyond the call of duty. As pilot of an F-105 aircraft, Lieutenant Colonel Thorsness was on a surface-to-air missile suppression mission over North Vietnam. Lieutenant Colonel Thorsness and his wingman attacked and silenced a surface-to-air missile site with air-to-ground missiles and then destroyed a second surface-to-air missile site with bombs. In the attack on the second missile site, Lieutenant Colonel Thorsness' wingman was shot down by intensive anti-aircraft fire, and the two crew members abandoned their aircraft. Lieutenant Colonel Thorsness circled the descending parachutes to keep the crew members in sight and relay their position to the Search and Rescue Center. During this maneuver, a MIG-17 was sighted in the area. Lieutenant Colonel Thorsness immediately initiated an attack and destroyed the MIG. Because his aircraft was low on fuel, he was forced to depart the area in search of a tanker.

Upon being advised that two helicopters were orbiting over the downed crew's position and that there were hostile MIGs in the area posing a serious threat to the helicopters, Lieutenant Colonel Thorsness, despite his low fuel condition, decided to return alone through a hostile environment of surface-to-air missile and anti-aircraft defenses to the downed crew's position. As he approached the area, he spotted four MIG-17 aircraft and immediately initiated an attack on the MIGs, damaging one and driving the others away from the rescue scene. When it became apparent that an aircraft in the area was critically low on fuel and the crew would have to abandon the aircraft unless they could reach a tanker, Lieutenant Colonel Thorsness, although critically short on fuel himself, helped to avert further possible loss of life and a friendly aircraft by recovering at a forward operating base, thus allowing the aircraft in emergency fuel condition to refuel safely.

Lieutenant Colonel Thorsness' extraordinary heroism, self-sacrifice and personal bravery involving conspicuous risk of life were in the highest traditions of the military service, and have reflected great credit upon himself and the U.S. Air Force.

He was commissioned an officer in the Army and was transferred to the 30th Infantry Division just prior to the Normandy Invasion of World War II. During his service in the military, Mr. Towers received many awards for recognition of valor and bravery, including the Purple Heart, Bronze Star with Oak Leaf Clusters, and others. Following the war, Mr. Towers and his wife returned to Germany for post-war occupation duty, and during this time three of their children were born, and their fourth was born after returning to the States. His story-telling style of speaking captured his audiences and resulted in opportunities for further historical research with people around the world. Locally, Mr. Towers received the Alachua County Veteran of the Year Award on two occasions, and was active in the D-Day Normandy Veterans of North Central Florida. In addition to his family, Mr. Towers was particularly proud of the presentation of the Order of Orange Nassau, from Queen Beatrix of the Netherlands. The equivalent of the Medal of Freedom in the United States, it was awarded to Mr. Towers because of the good-will he promoted over the years between the United States and The Netherlands. In July of 1918, the 42nd was committed to battle against the Germans to reduce the Marne Salient. In spite of withering machine gun fire and heavy artillery bombardment, the 168th Infantry took their objective. During the assault on Hill 212 on La Croix Rouge Farm, as the battle drew to an end, a messenger was needed to deliver an important word to one of the platoons. Private Martin A. Treptow grabbed the message and moved out under fire. As he reached the platoon leader, Treptow was shot down by a hail of bullets. Later, in policing up Treptow's personnel effects, a diary was found in the blood-stained blouse of this doughboy. Written in Treptow's own hands on the flyleaf under the heading, on December 31, 1917, he had written these words: "The end of a long Journey, now bring on your Wars, 1918 Revolution, America must win this war, therefore I will work, I will save, I will sacrifice, I will endure, I will fight cheerfully and do my utmost as if the whole issue of the struggle depended on me alone."
