WALDRON, Edwin Hugh Waldron Jr.

(Abstracted from info received from McCoy Anderson - a friend of Elmer's)
Edwin Hugh Waldron Jr. was born to Edwin Hugh Waldron and Grace Hunt July 6, 1919 in the Welch Emergency Hospital, Welch, WV; He was the first baby born in the hospital. He passed away quietly in Fresno, April 1, 2016. Ed grew up, raising himself in the woods of Welch and Browns Creek area being cared for by his Grandpa Rufus and his Grandma Polly until he joined the United States Navy in 1940. His first and only duty station was Pearl Harbor, and he is a Pearl Harbor Survivor. He was attached to the Litchfield, a destroyer, prior to being sent to NAS Moffitt Field for flight training. Ed spent the remainder of the war attached to a B-26 squadron on Ford Island. After the war, Ed was discharged from Vallejo, CA and went to Inglewood to visit his Grandma Polly who had moved out west during the war. Ed went to radio school near USC and sometime later got an apartment with a classmate by the name of Danny Kain. Through Danny he met and married Inez May Frazier who was also a Navy veteran. They moved to La Habra, in Orange County, and Ed worked as a lithographer, printer, and estimator until 1965 when he started his own business, Arrow Printing. In 1968 he merged the business with Anaheim Printing & Gazette. May & Ed retired in 1978 and moved to their desert home in Yucca Valley, and in 1990 moved to Madera where they spent the remainder of their beautiful years. Ed was a quiet, well loved and respected, wonderful man with many talents and over the years many interests. He was an excellent artist, oil painter, and furniture builder. He did antique clock repair, rock hounding, lapidary, gold panning, and gardening. He ground his own corn and wheat for their bread making, and was a great cook; Ed was a Master chess player, excellent at billiards, poker, and an avid reader. He was happiest flying and stream fishing. He got his private pilot's license and loved to fly off to London Bridge in Arizona and other southwestern spots just for lunch and a fun day. Ed's positive outlook oozed out of him and rubbed off on you every time you saw him. He had a lot to teach us about life and yet was a man of few words with a powerful impact. He was a blessing to all those who had the privilege to know him. His capacity to nurture and love was endless. His physical presence will be truly missed; his impact in our lives will live forever. Ed was a member of the Pearl Harbor Survivors Association and the Sons of the American Revolution. He was a survivor many times over; He survived his childhood for starters, many close calls during the war, cancer, and a heart attack in 1964. He was a very happy and positive man and always lived by the belief that "tomorrow will be a better day." Ed leaves behind daughter Patricia (John) Cline and their sons Sean, Patrick & Ian; daughter Cindy (Don) Reimer and their daughters Jennifer and Olivia, and several great grandchildren, and his niece DiAnn Kutsch. Ed's wonderful wife, "Mayzie", of 54 years preceded him in death in 2004. A graveside service will be held at the San Joaquin National Cemetery in Santa Nella, CA Friday, April 8, 2016. WALLI, Arne Walli

FLINT, MI -- With his feet as transportation and two thumbs as fare, Arne Walli began a long trek from the western tip of Lake Superior that landed him in Flint more than seven decades ago. Hitchhiking with a friend to the Windy City to find work at 19, Walli didn't take a liking to Chicago's hustle and bustle -- hailing from Wright, Minnesota, with a population of just over 100 to this day -- and kept moving east towards the Vehicle City as his new final destination. "It's a story he loved to tell," said daughter-in-law Gloria Walli, seated inside a booth at Firkin and Fox, in the same building as the remaining Walli's East Restaurant on Center Road. "He bragged about it all the time. He said he traveled 1,000 miles." Arne Walli, age 93, who died Thursday, May 8, 2014 after a long bout with Parkinson's Disease, left a large footprint on the Genesee County business community after migrating from Wright, where his parents Sophia and Jacob Walli had 12 children and owned a dairy farm, raising 50 head of cattle and various crops on the rich soil. "He also was proud of his five acres of strawberries he ended up having to plant, pick the strawberries, sell the strawberries and actually raise enough money to build a barn one summer," said his son, Ken Walli. "I think they were like five cents a quart at the time, so it took quite a few strawberries." A Cromwell High School graduate, Arne played basketball in his high school days, heading to the state finals one year with three of his cousins on the same roster from the postage-stamp sized town. Following graduation and the trek to Flint, Arne found work at a gas station in the area, found a job in the truck plant at Chevy in the Hole before moving onto AC Spark Plug where he operated automatic screw machines for a number of years. But it wasn't just work that Arne found in Flint. Gloria said Ken met Frances -- his wife of 61 years before her death in 2005 at 83 following a prolonged battle, including years of chemotherapy treatments, with ovarian cancer -- while at Beecher Gardens. "Her mom owned Beecher Gardens over on the North End," said Gloria. "It used to be the happening spot in Flint, and he would go in there and listen to the music and she worked there and her sister worked there and her brother worked there. They were the band." Ken said his mother played the violin, aunt played accordion and uncle on the drums, but they also both ended up working at AC. The couple married on Aug. 20, 1944 in Flint, during the final year of World War II. "He was in World War II right after they were first married," recalled Gloria, missing Ken's birth at Hurley by one day while trying to dash home for the special event. "He bragged about driving General (Dwight D.) Eisenhower, escorting him." After coming back home and finding work on the line at AC, Ken said there was a change in his father's mentality. "I think my dad kind of had it in his mind that he liked getting into business on his own and he really didn't like working in the shop," said Ken. The couple scratched together their savings in 1950 to open up Richardson Root Beer Stand on (5414) North Saginaw Street in Genesee Township. Ken said the drive-up stand with car hops and no inside seating was similar to an A&W restaurant of the era, and he would bring friends by for a bite and drink, but also began taking money as a child with his brother Bob, standing on a milk crate to reach the cash register. "They had some good root beer, good orange drink and we had the hot dogs and hamburgers to go with it," he smiled. With a business mind churning all the time, Gloria said Arne would sell Christmas trees outside the stand when it was closed during the winter months. Arne continued to work at AC for a few more years, until the business was able to gain enough traction to quit his job at the plant and focus all his energy into the restaurant. When it came time to renovate, Ken said the building wasn't torn down, but moved off the spot. "In 1958, he actually moved that building off the foundation and built the drive-in restaurant where actually you could come inside," he said, with the structure winding up in another community. "I think we had seating for about 80 to 90 people inside and also we had curb service on the outside with car hops." Arne and Frances further expanded in 1961, purchasing a garage to open a supper club featuring her recipes on the same property as the drive-in. "It was an old serving station that the guy did car repairs in," said Ken, with a remodel and addition coming six years later, but it eventually succumbed to a large fire in 1980. "They bought that, remodeled it and made that the supper club." Not only did the location serve as a place to grab some food, but it was in the heart of the cruising path for teenagers at the time. "That was the big thing back in the 60s," said Ken of cars streaming up and down Saginaw, with Gloria adding, "It was like Happy Days." "They drove from Colonel's to Walli's and to A&W downtown," she said. People would back in and line up for miles and miles down Saginaw Street." Ken recalled, "They would find a parking space so they could watch the girls drive by, to which Gloria laughed and said, "Girls and guys. Just about anyone over 50 would know about that, because that's where they'd hang out. Everything was safe. It was a fun time." Even years later, Ken said, "It's surprising how many people we've talked to that said something like oh, I met my wife at Walli's driving around." The business expanded in 1964, with the new Walli's West opening on West Pierson Road in Mt. Morris Township and Walli's Scandia Hall built in 1969, across from the supper club. When the original supper club was a victim of fire in 1980, Arne built a new version behind Walli's West. Not satisfied with just offering food, Walli had two laundromats and began to offer lodging for travelers to the area, building a hotel in 1976 to go along with the restaurants, along with a second location in 1972 at Walli's East, where the current restaurant stands on Center Road today next to the Super 8 motel still owned by the family. It was around the same time Arne became involved in forming the Flint Area Tourist and Convention Council, on which he served as an emeritus member until his death and a member of the Walli family has sat on since its inception. The Walli family continued to build and still operates the Wingate Hotel on I-475 near Hill Road in Grand Blanc Township, managed by Ron Walli, Ken's son -- which Gloria said Arne "was very involved in that too. He went there every day to inspect." After Frances became ill, Arne slowly began to step away from his involvement in the businesses. When the couple took time away from work, they would travel in their motor home, crisscrossing the country with family before eventually buying a second house in North Fort Myers, FL where they would spend a few months in the winter. The family would also gather at a cousin's home in the area, where Gloria said Arne's competitive juices were still flowing, willing to take on anyone in horseshoes, volleyball, softball, but also sitting down and playing cards of any kind he learned growing up during the bitter winter months as a child in Minnesota. "Any time he got around anybody that wanted to play cards, he was there," said Gloria, up to his final days at Cranberry Park, an assisted living facility in Clio. "In fact, right before he passed away, the Saturday before he died we were playing Shanghai rummy with him. He was still sharp." Even with all the good memories for the family, an empty spot remained at the stools entering Walli's Sunday where Arne would sit and chat with customers from any background, share a laugh and smile over a plate of food. "I think he had a great impact on the community. I think at 93, you're ready for them to let go, because they're suffering and they're in so much pain," said Gloria, holding back tears. "But it can't replace the loss you feel. He's in a better place, but we still feel the loss."

Arne Walli is survived by his sons, Ken (Gloria) of Grand Blanc, Bob (Sandy) of Grand Rapids; five grandchildren, Tim (Jacquie) Walli, Tami (Steve) Wolfram, Ron (Erin) Walli, Bob Walli and Vicki Walli; seven great-grandchildren, Makenzie, Lance, Payton, Reese, Sydney, Shea and Avery; two brothers, Sulo (Delores) and Ray (Donna). He was preceded in death by his wife Fran, sisters, Ida, Laura, Alma Bordwell and Jennie Waisanen, brothers, Eino, Arthur, Henry, Ernie and Carl. A funeral service will be Tuesday, May 13, 2014 at the Swartz Funeral Home, 1225 West Hill Road, followed by a private burial in Montrose Cemetery. In lieu of flowers, contributions may be made to the Parkinson's Foundation.

WHITACRE, H. Lee Whitacre

(Abstracted from the May 16, 2014 Toledo Blade)

H. Lee Whitacre, a longtime farmer who founded a trucking company heralded for its growth in the 1990s, died May 5 in Heritage Corner Health Care Campus, Bowling Green. He was 90. He had pneumonia, his wife, Margaret Ann Whitacre, said. Mr. Whitacre grew corn, wheat, and soybeans on the farm where he grew up in Wood County's Milton Township. The trucking company initially was an offshoot. "He was born and bred a farmer," said his wife, who was an office manager for Whitacre Trucking Inc. in Portage, OH. "He retired from farming at 77, but he retired from the trucking company at 82. He enjoyed the people. We had so many. I worked there right along with him, and our sons. He didn't have a hobby, and he built it from scratch, and it went from nothing to a large company. "By 1993 when his son Gary was president, the trucking firm employed about 100 full-time, reported annual sales of $6.4 million, and was on Inc. magazine's list of the 500 fastest growing companies. Mr. Whitacre was a founder of the intermodal firm, Roadlink USA, which later was sold. Whitacre Logistics, a company begun several years ago by son Gary - who had been president of Whitacre Trucking and a Roadlink executive - made the Inc. fastest-growing list in 2013. Mr. Whitacre "was immensely proud," his wife said. "He was a very humble man, and he didn't want much credit for anything, but he was proud of his sons and what they accomplished. "He was born Oct. 18, 1923, to Myrtle and Harry Whitacre in Weston, OH. He was a 1941 graduate of the former Milton Township High School. He enlisted in the Army during World War II and was a truck driver attached to the 82nd Airborne Division. "That's where it all started," his wife said. He landed in France weeks after the D-Day invasion and delivered gasoline and other supplies to troops. He resumed farming after the war and several years later bought a truck to haul grain. Eventually, he and his son Dan farmed together, the family bought more trucks, and started hauling freight. Under the oversight of son Gary, the firm in the late 1980s expanded into the burgeoning intermodal field - transporting goods that were shipped by rail, for instance, to a final destination. Sons Dan and Steve also were involved. "It was quite a family affair," his wife said. The couple took several trips to Europe and Hawaii. Surviving are his wife, Margaret Ann Whitacre, whom he married July 23, 1949; sons, Edward, Daniel, Steven, Gary, and Kenneth; 10 grandchildren, and nine great-grandchildren. A celebration of life is set for Saturday in Nazareth Hall near Grand Rapids. Arrangements are by the Rodenberger Funeral Home, Deshler, OH. The family suggests tributes to St. Louis School in Custar, OH, or Cherry Street Mission in Toledo.

WILLENBERG, Samuel Willenberg

(Abstracted from Internet sources)

JERUSALEM - Samuel Willenberg, the last survivor of Treblinka, the Nazi death camp where 875,000 people were systematically murdered, has died in Israel at the age of 93. Only 67 people are known to have survived the camp, fleeing in a revolt shortly before it was destroyed. Treblinka holds a notorious place in history as perhaps the most vivid example of the "Final Solution," the Nazi plan to exterminate Europe's Jews. Unlike at other camps, where some Jews were assigned to forced labor before being killed, nearly all Jews brought to Treblinka were immediately gassed to death. Only a select few -- mostly young, strong men like Willenberg, who was 20 at the time-- were spared from immediate death and assigned to maintenance work instead. On Aug. 2, 1943, a group of Jews stole some weapons, set fire to the camp and headed to the woods. Hundreds fled, but most were shot and killed by Nazi troops in the surrounding mine fields or captured by Polish villagers who returned them to Treblinka. "The world cannot forget Treblinka," Willenberg told The Associated Press in a 2010 interview. He described how he was shot in the leg as he climbed over bodies piled at the barbed wire fence and catapulted over. He kept running, ignoring dead friends in his path. He said his blue eyes and "non-Jewish" look allowed him to survive in the countryside before arriving in Warsaw and joining the Polish underground. After the war Willenberg moved to Israel and became a surveyor for the Housing Ministry. Later in life, he took up sculpting to describe his experiences. His bronze statues depicted Jews standing on a train platform, a father removing his son's shoes before entering the gas chambers, a young girl having her head shaved, and prisoners removing bodies. "I live two lives, one is here and now and the other is what happened there," Willenberg said. "It never leaves me. It stays in my head. It goes with me always." His two sisters were killed at Treblinka. He described his survival as "chance, sheer chance." The Nazis and their collaborators killed about 6 million Jews during the Holocaust. The death toll at Treblinka was second only to Auschwitz -- a prison camp where more than a million people died in gas chambers or from starvation, disease and forced labor. His daughter said he died on Friday. He is survived by a daughter and grandchildren.

WINKELMANN, Richard Winkelmann

(Abstracted from the internet August 27, 2012)

Richard Winkelmann, a Mayo Clinic physician and researcher who helped meld the disciplines of dermatology and pathology, died of pancreatic cancer Aug. 16 at his home in Rochester, Minn. He was 88. "Dad was at the cusp of modernizing dermatology, taking it to a real clinical science," said his son Rich Winkelmann, of Marine on St. Croix. Winkelmann was born in Akron, Ohio, where his father was a research chemist in the rubber industry. In 1943, during his second year at the University of Akron, he was drafted into the Army, which soon recognized his scientific acumen and pulled him out of basic training for medical training. He was sent to the University of Michigan for premed, then to Marquette University Medical School in Milwaukee. By the time he was finished, the war was over, so he spent his service time at public health centers in Knoxville, TN, and Birmingham, AL. In the early 1950s, he was working as a resident at the Mayo Clinic and toward his Ph.D. at the University of Minnesota.

"Dermatology interested him greatly; he felt the skin was an underappreciated and understudied organ. Winkelmann became an early researcher in that area, "studying skin diseases under the microscope and creating the taxonomy of dermatology in English and three other languages." In 1956, his Ph.D. completed, he joined the Mayo staff and chaired its department of dermatology from 1970 to 1975. He wrote six books and more than 800 scholarly articles. Dr. Jennifer McNiff, president of the American Society of Dermatopathology, wrote that Winkelmann was "a leader and visionary ... [who] was instrumental in describing the diagnosis and treatment of innumerable unique conditions, including cutaneous extravascular necrotizing granuloma," a condition commonly called Winkelmann granuloma. He and Anne Robertson, an artist from South St. Paul whom he met in Rochester, were married in 1952 and raised four children. He was ever industrious, his son said. "Once I saw Dad mowing the lawn in a suit and tie" before a party or work, he said. "He said, 'I have a half an hour, might as well not waste it.'" In 1994, Winkelmann retired from the Mayo Clinic and began spending winters in Fountain Hills, Ariz., and summers on the St. Croix. He took up doing research at Mayo Clinic Scottsdale and teaching at Arizona State University. Four years ago, he and Anne moved to Charter House, an assisted-living facility in Rochester. In addition to his wife and Rich, he is survived by another son, John of Cincinnati; two daughters, Lisa Speltz of Guilford, Conn., and Susan Winkelmann of Minneapolis, and four grandchildren. A memorial service will be held at 10:30 a.m. Sept. 6 at Charter House in Rochester.

WISE, Wayne Wise

(Abstracted from an article from the Aug 10, 2010 JOC.com)

Wayne Wise, who with his wife Donna founded Western Express, one of the nation's top 50 trucking companies, died July 31 at the age of 60. Wise died in his sleep, according to the Nashville Business Journal. The cause of his death was undetermined. Wise had heart surgery two years ago. The Nashville, TN-based truckload carrier the Wises launched in 1991 had nearly $440 million in revenue last year, according to estimates from SJ Consulting. It ranked at 39 on the Journal of Commerce's list of top 50 trucking companies ranked by revenue, and was the 18th largest truckload carrier in 2009. Paul L. Wieck, a long-time Western Express executive and American Freightways and Roadway Express veteran, was named interim president. When Wise started his career in 1971, trucking was still a highly regulated industry. He grasped opportunities offered by deregulation to launch trucking businesses. Not all of those opportunities worked out well -- one of his first attempts to launch a trucking business ended in bankruptcy. But Western Express prospered. Wise got his start in shipping, working as a traffic manager for Carrier Corp. From 1974 through 1980 he was a freight agent for Ryder Truck Lines and T.I.M.E.-DC. In 1981 he founded trucking company Expressco, serving as its president until 1991. Expressco declared bankruptcy in 1988. The case was closed in 1997. Western Express grew throughout the 1990s but shifted into higher gear in the last decade, with revenue rising from less than $50 million in 2000 to $594 million in 2008. Its sales fell about 26 percent last year as the recession pummeled trucking.

The company, which contemplated an initial public offering earlier in the decade, raised $285 million in April by selling eight-year securities. It used the fund to pay off its debt and to upgrade its 2,500-tractor fleet with new trucks. Western Express ordered 900 Freightliner Cascadia tractors in May.
